

Miriam Bruns is the executive director of the Goethe-Zentrum Atlanta, the official cultural and language representative of Germany in the United States. Ms. Bruns strives, in her position as director, to foster education, the arts, and international cultural understanding. From 2007 through 2012, she headed the organization's program and education departments.

Before moving to Atlanta from Germany, Ms. Bruns taught Modern German Literature and Foreign Language Pedagogy at Braunschweig University and worked in banking as a customer consultant.

Ms. Bruns obtained a master's degree from Braunschweig University (Germany) in English and German literature and linguistics. Concurrently she obtained a teaching certificate in the field of teaching German as a foreign language. She was awarded a DAAD (German Academic Exchange) Scholarship by the German Government to study at Scotland's Aberdeen University. Ms. Bruns is currently finishing her master's degree in nonprofit management.

Ms. Bruns is a member of the advisory council of Emory University's German Department, a member of the Association of Fundraising Professionals (AFP), and holds the Certified Fund Raising Executive designation awarded by CFRE International.
