

Biography – Rachel Ezzo

Rachel joined Kate's Club with over a decade worth of experience in budgeting, finance and development, along with strong technical acumen, in January 2012. As Director of Development and Communications, Rachel works directly with the organization's Executive Director and Board to set the fundraising strategy for the organization which includes cultivating individual donors, executing social media campaigns related to fundraising and donor campaigns, developing peer-to-peer fundraising activities, leading grant and foundational opportunities, and supporting volunteer committees in securing corporate sponsorships for special events. Rachel earned her designation as a Certified Fundraising Executive in 2017.

Prior to joining Kate's Club, Rachel was the Director of Information and Prospect Research at Columbia Theological Seminary. Earlier, she worked for The Atlanta Opera as the organization's finance and IT manager. Rachel received a B.A. in Political Science and a B.S. in Economics from Georgia State University.

Rachel shares a true passion for the work she does at Kate's Club because she cares about the mission. Working at Kate's Club has helped Rachel cope and express her own grief as she's experienced some very personal deaths including the recent death of her mother. The awareness she's received working at Kate's Club has provided the knowledge to help her nephews and son cope with these deaths in an age appropriate way. Rachel, an Atlanta native, and her husband Zack live in Ormewood Park with their son Adam.
